

Monash Business Review

Call for Papers

Monash Business Review* is calling for papers from academics and senior business people throughout Australia and worldwide that highlight important research, ideas and trends relevant to the business community.

Monash Business Review is a journal that aims to communicate research to the broader community about the improvement and development of business in Australia and overseas. The journal is published three times a year and appears in both print and online at www.mbr.monash.edu.

If you have some original, unpublished research, an educated and unique point-of-view, or conference paper on a topical issue, we want to hear from you. Your submission does not have to adhere to any specific format or style, but needs to have a good narrative based on a strong, original concept that is well thought through and researched.

Papers are classified as one of two types:

1. Refereed – research requiring referee reports
2. Other – papers not requiring referee reports e.g. case studies, opinion pieces, commentary, reviews.

When referee reports are completed (if relevant), you will be notified whether your manuscript is accepted as is; accepted with corrections; accepted with revision; rejected. The Managing Editor's decision is final.

Accepted papers are edited to suit a broad-based business readership and do not include references or citations. However full versions of refereed research papers are made available to subscribers (immediately) and the public (with embargo). Refereed authors may receive DEEWR recognition (Australian authors).

ePress online submission and refereeing system:
www.epress.monash.edu/submission

You can use ePress' online submission and refereeing to:

1. Submit an article and accompanying files (i.e. images, cover letter).
2. Track the progress of your paper (Note: the system preserves the anonymity of the refereeing process by not disclosing referee names to the author and vice-versa).
3. View referee reports on your paper after they are released through the system.
4. Upload a revised version of your paper, provided you are requested to do so through the system.

Authors: To preserve anonymity, please ensure your name and identity is completely removed from your paper prior to upload; including the file name and 'Properties' box (under 'File' top right of screen).
